Improving lives after brain injury

What is a charity member?

Members have ultimate control over the charity, because they vote on decisions relating to things such as changing the charity's constitution and appointing and removing trustees. Members, however, do not have responsibility for the management of the charity's day to day activities.

Membership of a charity can bring real benefits both to the work of the charity and for society more generally. When a charity's members are active in shaping the agenda and objectives of their charity, the trustee body is refreshed and its accountability to its members is improved. The membership fee is vital to support us to deliver services and makes a real difference to people with acquired brain injuries.
